NOW that 1986 has come and gone we can reflect on a year that has seen disruption and turmoil throughout the world. It was a year which saw many thousands starving and dying in Ethiopia and other African nations, due to years of Capitalist exploitation, and now their own Marxist rulers' indifference and personal greed.

1986 was a year in which we came the closest so far to a nuclear catastrophe, with all of Europe suffering various levels of nuclear contamination as a result of an explosion and near melt down at the Soviet nuclear reactor at Chernobyl.

It was a year when the USA truly earned its nickname 'The Great Satan' with its unprovoked and murderous attack against the independent nation of Libya. Later they were to accuse Syria of the same unproven charges of supporting terror attacks against Americans in Europe and the Middle East.

NATIONAL LIBERATION

It was the year that saw the 30th anniversary of the heroic Hungarian resistance to the Soviet invasion in 1956, when men, women and children opposed Soviet tanks and heavily armed soldiers with their bare hands, for the love of their nation and Europe.

1986 also saw the 7th anniversary of the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan. To this day 110,000 heavily armed Soviet troops, backed by tanks and helicopter gunships, are fighting a bitter, repressive war against the Afghan nation. But after 7 years of forced exile in the mountains, the Afghan Mujahideen are still gallantly leading their people in a war of national liberation.

The same Muslim fundamentalism strengthened Iran in her struggle to end the Gulf War started by Western-backed Iraq. The powerful concept of 'Holy War' also began to make a marked difference to the long struggle of the Palestinians to take their country back from Zionist occupation.

With the continued struggle of the nations of South America to put an end to U.S. exploitation, it has been a year of turmoil and retreat for the forces of Imperialism and Internationalism, both East and West, and one of advances for a Third Way.

REBIRTH

1986 has been a year of disruption and sabotage within our own movement. This has led to a rebirth and a renewed bond of comradeship, Militancy and Purpose within the NF. We have seen an attempt by various organs of the System to disrupt postal and telephone communications and bankrupt us out of existence.

We have also seen the emergence of an irrelevant grouping of reactionaries, thieves, spies, drunks, opportunists, perverts and malcontents, and have cleansed our movement of them.

Several of our leaders and activists have been framed by the police and as a result many are beginning 1987 in prison, particularly in Ulster. This is a new form of oppression to be experienced by the NF. Members have been jailed before under the infamous Race Act, but never before has the State been forced to frame activists with Public Order offences and conspiracy charges, in order to remove them from circulation for a while.

But we have faced it, and have, so far, overcome it to emerge stronger than before.

We now have a new structure which should set us up well for the coming years. We have a fortnightly newspaper over a year before its original predicted inception, thanks to the State's repression forcing us to tighten up our organization. We have also emerged with a renewed sense of Commitment and Purpose.

This is the spirit in which we enter 1987. 1986 was the year of planning, regrouping and raising of standards. 1987 will be the year for building, the year of preparation.

IMPORTANT NOTICE; Whenever possible, hand correspondence for the NF, NF News or the Bookshops to your local NF contact, so that it can be delivered through the movement's internal postal system. This is very important when dealing with subscriptions, orders and membership payments.

If you do have to use the Post Office network, ALWAYS use RECORDED DELIVERY and keep your receipt safely.

While the constant interference with our post is irritating, this attempt to disrupt the NF is a tribute to its growing effectiveness. So rather than moaning about it, all NF members and supporters must accept the hard work and discipline needed to make our internal communications network an efficient alternative.

DEAR
EDITOR

P.O. BOX 41.
NORWICH,
NORFOLK,
NR3 2AH.

Dear Sir,

I was interested to see that in your article 'Just a Matter of Time', in issue 82 of NF News, you mentioned the May and Baker chemical factory in Norwich, and the fact that they are responsible for discharging deadly wastes, including mercury, into the River Wensum.

You said that this was threatening the whole eco-system of the Norfolk Broads. What your article did not mention was that May and Baker were also responsible during 1986, for putting the whole population of Norwich at deadly risk by contaminating the fresh water supply.

May and Baker discharged a large amount of chlorine which seeped into the reservoirs at the nearby Heigham Water Works, which serve Norwich with its fresh water.

The chlorine killed all the bacteria which purifies the water and for several days around 250,000 people used and drank untreated water.

This is probably the worst example of May and Baker's neglect and utter disregard for the environment and even for human life, but there are countless other accidental and deliberate discharges from this and similar factories throughout Britain, and we only get to hear about a small percentage of them.

I've only seen a few issues of NF News and I'm not sure what you would do about situations like May and Baker, but from what I read in your newspaper I'm sure that you would take some action against things like this, which is more than our council have done.

Yours sincerely,
Christine Burrell

River Pollution

Dear Sir,

I read with interest the article in NF News, issue 80, entitled, 'The Rape of Britain'.

The photograph reminded me of parts of West Norfolk before the '39/45 war. Six to eight villages were destroyed to make a 'Battle Area', together with nearly twenty thousand acres of good farmland. The government promised to rebuild the villages after the war, but of course they did no such thing.

Since then a 'Yorkshire farmer' called Smith has bought up the Claremont Hall Estate at Little Cressingham. He has destroyed most of the village at Little Cressingham and the three small farms, plus about a dozen cottages. He has also uprooted fences and made the area into a prairie.

BRETON SUCCESS POINTS THE WAY TO CORNISH REVIVAL

IT IS not surprising to find that Brittany on the north coast of France resembles Cornwall in landscape, language and in the temperament of its people. Both these ancient nationalities share a common heritage.

What is shocking is to find that Cornwall is now suffering the economic and social problems which once blighted Brittany. In 1960 with one of the worst unemployment rates in Europe, Brittany was understandably depressed. The very existence of a distinct European culture was threatened.

Today Cornwall has an unemployment problem far worse than places like Brixton or Toxteth, and the situation is worsening. This will simply lead to more Cornish people emigrating in search of work, and thus sound the death knell for the Cornish Nation.

Yet their Breton cousins have brought about their own remarkable economic recovery. Today Brittany is one of the richest areas of France. Whereas twenty-five years ago its roads were little bumpy tracks, today it is served by fast motorways.

In 1960 most ambitious young Bretons emigrated, today Brittany is the only 'depotement' on the French mainland to show an employment and productivity gain of more than 10%, between 1976 and 1983. Brittany now controls the vegetable production of France, and it grows and sells more cauliflowers than any other European Nation.

The foundation of this 'economic miracle' is a co-operative farming movement second to none. In 1961 a small committee of farmers formed 'Sica', with the idea that small farmers would pool their produce and hand it over to agents to sell on the open market for the best price.

Every family was mobilised to work together. It was clear that many obsolescent tools would have to be discarded in favour of mechanisation and new technology, but as always there was the problem of finance.

That was where Alex Gourveme, a local pig farmer, came in. "We had too many peasants, too many foreigners in France. But above all we were blind. We closed our eyes and turned our backs to the sea. Whenever we turn our backs to the sea we become impoverished. It served us right."

So the farmers of 'Sica' clubbed together the profit from their first sales to build the ship that could transport their produce to Plymouth.

As Gourveme says, "We are nearer to Plymouth than to Paris, and Plymouth is nearer to Rennes than to London."

Dear NF News,

After a long period of Tory mis-rule Ealing is now Labour controlled. They have only been in power less than six months, and the effects of their work can be felt all over Ealing, and I don't mean that as a compliment.

Recently I heard that they plan to move hundreds of Town Hall staff into a luxury office block that has been empty for the last six years because the rent was too high, at £20,000 per week or over £1 million per year.

Full page adverts have appeared in local papers for job vacancies for Racial Equality Advisers, Ethnic Minority Committee workers, and assistants to the Police Watchdog Committee.

Links with groups supporting I.R.A. terrorists have been established as with other Labour controlled councils.

The voters pay the price though, with a rates rise of 100% from 1st April, 1987, with over three years more of Labour control still to go.

That means over three years more of attempts to educate our children that homosexual and lesbian relationships are 'normal' and a fact of everyday life.

The Labour voters should have learnt from the lessons of the voters in Brent, Hackney, Islington and Lambeth, but now they will learn their lesson first hand with three more years of Labour lunacy.

Yours in support,
A.M. - Acton

Although he is the owner of Claremont Hall, I understand that he is a tax dodger, officially living on the island of Jersey.

The Government now say that it needs another 6 to 7 thousand acres to increase the 'Battle Area', to include Great Cressingham and Hillborough.

One wonders what our men are practicing war games for when they are not allowed to use real bullets to effectively crush the IRA in Ulster. Are they planning to waste more lives in another foreign 'Jewish' war?

Yours sincerely,
M Phillips
Coombe Bissett
Wilts

That was the beginning, today there are nine ships and whenever the co-op sells produce a levy on the profits goes to the fleet.

Gourveme is now the chairman of both 'Sica' and Brittany's committee concerned with economic development. He is totally satisfied that with the co-operative's performance so far, but says, "We should have far more service industries, more banks and more insurance companies."

Nevertheless this criticism simply emphasises that Brittany has yet to fully embrace what nationalists have come to term the 'community-benefit' state.

In the Mondragon region of Spain the Basque community have gone further, creating their own health service and investment bank. Britain has nothing at present to even faintly compare.

The essential lesson of Brittany is that ordinary people can control their own economic and political destinies. It proves that we need not be at the mercy of forces outside our control, and that Nations like Brittany, Cornwall and Ulster can be more than mere provinces of superstates.

GET INVOLVED

THE NEW structure for the National Front adopted at the AGM has now come into operation. A full explanation of just how it works was published in the last issue of NF News.

The underlying aim of the new structure is to make membership of the National Front something obviously very special. Unlike involvement with any other "Nationalist" group, it can no longer be bought by anyone with a few spare pounds who fancies a bit of excitement. From now on, membership of the NF is a privilege to be earned by dedication and ability, not an automatic right.

At the same time, the activists and officials who attended the AGM knew that there are many people who, for perfectly good reasons, simply cannot put in the time, energy or money to be members under the new system. But such people can still make a very useful contribution to the Movement at local level, so a place has been found for them as well.

As a result, involvement with the National Front must now take place on one of three levels: cadre; candidate cadre, and NF News Supporter.

There is a place for every sincere Nationalist in Britain in one of these categories. You are urged to apply today for the category which suits you best. Get involved with the Movement of the Future.

I wish to register as an NF News Supporter and receive five copies of Britain's Number One Nationalist newspaper per issue. I understand that this entitles me to attend local and national NFN Supporters meetings.

I have paid my first £3 to my local organizer/have completed the Standing Order form and sent it to my Bank/will pay by the Post Office Transcash system.

Nationalism

No.3

The New Man

IN PART TWO of this series, it was stated that there would be no National Revolution in this country until such time as the New Man came into being; a man who would reject the ethos of the modern world in its entirety - a world engulfed in an ocean of corruption and decadence - and would embody in his every thought, word and deed the organic and spiritual values of our New World.

The importance of this New Man cannot be exaggerated, for he is at the very centre of our world view; without him Nationalism is an empty word, a dead letter. The New Man is the central pillar of our New Order - without this pillar, all of our efforts will necessarily come to nothing.

Nationalists all over the world have written a great deal on the subject of the New Man, and there remains much to be written. However, it is vital that from the start we appreciate the essential nature of this New Man: he is NOT some racially ideal, God-like figure who strides across the globe building a perfect society with the aid of an infallible logic. Rather he is an extension of everyday humanity, the very real people who live now, but he is an extension where every attempt has been made to purge human nature of its defects, of its flaws.

This is not to say that we believe in the Perfect Man, but rather that we are seeking to mould a Man who has sought to overcome himself, has sought for the good and true of his character to come to the foreground, to shine out like a beacon in the night. We cannot achieve perfection in Man, but we can and must aim for a better Man.

We must seek to create a nation of people where tendencies towards greed, selfishness, hatred, dishonesty and envy are strongly curbed, and where the compassion, generosity, love and truth that can be found in each of us is heightened.

Make no mistake - the degeneracy of our culture and of our peoples is at an advanced stage. Half-hearted and belated measures will not stem this advance, let alone reverse it. This can only be done through the power of a positive spiritual commitment, surging through the community and through every individual.

Naturally, we cannot expect to create this New Man overnight, for it is the work of a lifetime: a talented chef, a powerful artist, an inspired poet, these are the products of endurance, patience, determination and a desire to succeed, and this is even truer of the New Man.

SMALL BEGINNINGS

Thus, we must begin this building process by tackling things that, with a little effort, are within our grasp, and which when achieved will give us the ability and the hope to succeed in greater, more weighty affairs.

We must begin by curbing the myriad little evils within ourselves, so that a fertile soil for the growth of goodness is laid. In theory this sounds the easiest thing in the world, but in practise it is the most difficult. We all know what it is like when we are tempted to do something that we know is wrong - and we all know too well how often we have lacked the will power, the moral courage, to resist this temptation.

Yet we who cannot overcome ourselves in minor things are apparently determined to overthrow a world of evil! The contrast could not be more startling.

DIFFICULT PATH

Once we admit openly that we are fundamentally weak beings - and the devastation of our once beautiful world is the most dramatic testimony of that weakness - we can set about the tremendous task of strengthening ourselves spiritually, ways that will give us the courage to face the fire and blood that the forces of evil will direct at us in the future, ways that will not change us overnight, but which will point us in the right direction.

For now, let us resolve to set out on the difficult path that leads to the New Man, and upon which our very national existence depends.
